Geo. W. Jones:

DEAR SIR—I have delayed answering your letter in order to send you the enclosed certificate. Mr. Bart Reeve declines to give a testimonial at present for the reason that he has been under the treatment of a number of Physicians and thinks that they might not like it if he were to make the affirmation of the effect your Mineral Water had upon him. I will describe the case to you as near as I can: He had been sick about two years and an unnatural belt had formed around him just below the ribs. He drank your Mineral Water three or four days and the belt went off in such a way as to cause his legs and feet to swell, but that soon disappeared, and he is now in comfortable health. The doctors had all given up that he could not get well. There are a number of persons here who have spoken to me for some of the water to use in various cases, and I would like to use a little myself. I think it is the best nervous remedy I ever knew. Please send me five gallons of the water. Respectfully.

Not long after I was admitted to the bar, a client of mine—about the only one I had at the time—employed me to go up into the country to look up the title to some great showmen to whom we rent our animals, race horses and many fancy birds, as well as many other curiosities. "One of them said I had taken cold, and she stuck my feet in a tub of hot water, and kept pouring in more from a teakettle until my feet were parboiled. Then she slapped a big mustard poultice on my chest, filled me up with catnip tea, and put me to bed, with a hot flatiron at my feet and a bottle of hot water on each side of me. Then she smothered me with blankets and went away.

"After she had gone another one went for me. She said I had got the fever and ague, and chucked a lot of quinine down my throat.

"A third said I had typhoid fever, and she swaddled my head up in cloths soaked with cold water, and gave me a hot whisky sling. The next morning I was as red as a beef-steak."

"What caused that?"

Take, for instance, the racing stock. Accidents are liable to happen to Loise running round the ring or taking the hurdles. To guard against any loss and protect ourselves, it is clearly stipulated that should any of the animals sustain injuries from which they may be incapacitated for a time, or their usefulness in the ring impaired for good, we place a good round sum on their heads; so large, indeed, that we at once compel the lessor to be ever careful and mindful of them.
